Chapter 1 by Zara Rose

I was running through trees, so many trees, trying to get away from the pain and the memories. I was running from the people who had did this to me. The people who had treated me like a lab rat. The people who made me into a monster.

For the past twelve years of my life, I had been...tortured and mutated. I was much stronger, faster, and smarter than the average person. I was almost indestructible and that was the whole purpose for those experiments. To make me into a weapon. An indestructible weapon.

I had just recently escaped and they were already chasing after me. I didn't want to go back to the pain. I didn't want to go back to that room, to that table, to that cage.

I wanted out of the pain that has been my constant companion for twelve years of my life. I want to be normal again. I want my family. I wanted many things.

I'm eighteen years old, yet I feel as if I'm only six years old. It felt like my life wasn't in my hands anymore. That all my decisions were taken from me by the time I was six years old, when I was first taken.

So I kept on running. Where? I had no idea, maybe I would go to the Atlantic Ocean and swim to Europe or Africa. Maybe I would find my family who lives in Siberia. I'll be happy with whatever I do, so long as I'm away from them.
